

In their reply comments of June 22, 2004, Ambient Corporation (Ambient) has made an assertion that requires a response. The quoted section is from Ambient's reply comments.

"We support adoption of the BPL installation database, as long as it is kept confidential and available for FCC and other Federal Government users only."

The FCC has a responsibility to licensed spectrum users to help them identify and eliminate interference from unlicensed users. A confidential database does not serve this end. What does Ambient have to hide?